No name...                      - Ford: the cars.                      - More: have you noticed how things seem to get better, bigger, etc. in the story?                      - Bere: the brew.                      - Richard, of course. Has anyone spotted other connections? Dr Liebchen IP: Logged

We are all interested in your new thinking. Please expand. Interesting that Saffron last year linked to William Vigor from the Prosser's card. quote: Try this, the lines about the prossers and priors - take the last word of each line and you have "Prossers past strong fast" does this refer to the Abbots of Glastonbury? If it does it could refer to William Vigor (Vigor being strong and fast). William Vigor was the Abbot responsible for reviving the Joseph of Arithamea story to help swell the coffers of an ailing abbey in 1219. He was successful at increasing the wealth of the abbey. IP: Logged

I didn't get any further with it although I still feel there is more than I came up with last year.

One other thing though, I wondered if the 'George' and angry in the third invitation has some reference to Malta being awarded the George Cross?

Keep hunting

Have I missed something here, Saffron? I don't remember there being anything about being angry when I decoded the third invitation - I thought it just inferred being sad and/or frightened.

I can't remember exactly how it goes now, but I think it contains the phrase "forbad George to get angry".

The Malta theory was also suggested here:

I have been re-visiting this topic, but I still don't get anything about George being angry for the decode of this invitation. I get a bit about the lawman and then a continuation about a lady. Can anyone help me with this please. Have I missed something - like a second de-code?

What strikes me about this list is that its edges were cut off.

In the abbots list MUCA and CUMA are anagrams. Eadem mutata resurgo. Just a thought!
