There's a piece of paper... some people say it's "Phi 1/2". Looking at it closer I see a colon (  , the letter ro (like a p) and the 1/2. Any relationship with the 235 map? - in Simon's letter? After all, it says that it is the starting point. But what is there in this letter that could be a starting point? The word "letter"? What else?  I'm puzzled. In the Merlin Mystery, you really had to work from the starting point, i.e. the seven solids. Is it the same here? Is anything else, i.e. any other approach, useless unless taken in stages, i.e. started at the starting point?  Dr Liebchen  IP: Logged

They stopped last year so I looked for something on the net to do and found the UQ. I have found it very absorbing, I think it is brilliant and very cleverly done. I did have Masquerade a long time ago but did not get very far with it. Foxglove  IP: Logged
